Henwood takes on Roberts for council seat

Voters in Haliburton village will have a choice this fall between two candidates with very diverse election platforms.

The competition for councillor of Ward 1, which encompasses part of the village of Haliburton in Dysart et al, is currently between incumbent Andrea Roberts and businessman Jim Henwood.

While both nominees have filed to fill the same seat on council, the similarities between the two individuals end there.

Roberts, who sat on council for the past three-and-a-half years, is looking to continue work on the projects the municipality has underway, as well as staying involved in the community.

In the bustling hallways of the high school, there is a place of calm where students and staff alike can find a kind face, a willing listener and a warm heart.

The desk of head secretary June Smith – or “Saint June,” as principal Gary Brohman calls her – is where people go to seek solace or get a problem fixed, which is why Smith received the support staff Impact Award from the school board this year.

Upon completion, there will be barbecue in Tory Hill to show our appreciation for a job well done. For more information, please call Bob Johnson at 705-489-3878.

‘Saint June’ honoured for work at high school

“Most days you could take the sign off her desk of head secretary and write ‘miracle worker,’” Brohman told the audience at the Trillium Lakelands District School Board’s Evening of Excellence June 2.

“First and foremost when you go to her you get VIP treatment. How nice is that? She makes all students her highest priority when they come to her desk. She had a warm, warm, special place in her heart for special needs kids,” he said.

For four years, a student named Lisa battled cancer while at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School and Smith was her confidante, Brohman said.

“She’d come to June’s desk with tears and distraught and she’d leave with a smile and better self-esteem,” he said.

Smith has also been actively involved in community pursuits, organizing the Terry Fox Run and managing the music festival at the Northern Lights Pavilion.

Accepting her award, Smith was humble.

“My philosophy with my job is pretty straightforward. I’m a very lucky woman. I leave my home every morning and I come to school and I do a job that I absolutely love. I work with a group of staff and people who are just unbelievably great,” she said.

And it is the students that make her job great.

“It’s about the kids. When they bring that energy it’s an unbelievable sensation and each and every one of them that come to my desk with all their variety of needs are so very special. Some days I’m a little teary over an incident and some days I can’t stop laughing. It’s just an amazing, amazing atmosphere and I consider myself so very lucky to do what I do. I’m a very, very lucky woman indeed,” she said.

This year, the board recognized 84 staff members for Character Awards, which are given for commitment to building students’ character.

OPP BRIEFS

Pickup truck takes out guide posts, man charged

A 20-year-old Highlands East man was charged with impaired driving, driving over 80 mgs and failing to remain at an accident May 28.

Shortly after 10 p.m. Friday night, the OPP was called to a collision on Glamorgan Road (the old Buckhorn Road) and found that a pickup truck travelling north had struck guide posts on the corner of the opposite lane.

The truck had left the scene, but the driver was soon found and arrested by the police.

Two accidents at one site on Hwy. 503

Two men involved in an early morning car accident on County Road 503 ended up in hospital after a second accident occurred at the same site.

Just after 7 a.m. May 31, OPP arrived to a single-vehicle collision near Glamour Lake Road.

After speaking with the officer, the driver, a 30-year-old man from Cameron, got out of the police cruiser to talk with a friend who had arrived on the scene in his pickup truck and was parked on the east shoulder of the road.

While they were talking, a Volkswagen headed south on 503 crossed the roadway into the northbound lane and hit the parked truck.

The Cameron man was standing beside the truck and his friend, a 47-year-old man from Bancroft, was just getting out of the vehicle when it was hit.

The man in the original accident was “thrown into the air and ended up in the ditch,” according to police reports. The man exiting the car was also injured, as was the driver of the oncoming Volkswagen.

All three individuals were taken to Haliburton hospital, at which point the man from Bancroft was flown to St. Michael’s Hospital in Toronto. The other two parties were treated and released.

The driver of the Volkswagen, a 46-year-old woman from Brampton was charged with careless driving.

Haliburton woman hits school bus in Bancroft

On May 25, officers from the Bancroft OPP were dispatched to a motor vehicle collision at the intersection of Sherbourne Street and Station Street in the town of Bancroft. Investigation revealed that an international school bus was stopped on Sherbourne Street when a Ford car struck the rear of the bus.

The driver of the bus, a 51-year-old female of Bancroft and students on the bus did not sustain any injuries.

The female driver of the Ford car, a 25-year-old from Haliburton did not sustain any injuries and has been charged with follow too closely, contrary to the Highway Traffic Act.

HHHS BRIEFS

Haliburton to support Muskoka during G8

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the meeting of Haliburton Highlands Health Services board May 31.

Hospitals in the county may be getting a few extra visitors during the G8 Summit in an effort to provide extra support to health services in Muskoka.

Paul Rosebush, CEO of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services, informed the board of directors that the county would be providing extra support for any emergency room overflow Muskoka receives during the summit.

"We may get some diverted ER patients," said Rosebush. "Some of the protesters may also be sent here. We will be setting up a hazmat tent in Minden to prepare for this."

Rosebush told the board he believed the support would benefit the county for a number of reasons.

"It's nice for us to participate and this gives us an opportunity to network with Muskoka," said Rosebush. "The G20 support will give us a chance to practice some emergency response procedures as well."

President of medical staff Dr. Norm Bottum inquired whether the hospital would be receiving funding assistance from the government for providing the additional support.

"It will be treated the same as the H1N1 clinic," said Rosebush. "We will be asked to keep track of our numbers, submit a bill and keep our fingers crossed that we get all of the funds."

Rosebush told the board the bill submitted for the H1N1 costs incurred were paid in full by the province.

Haliburton hospital deals with another Norwalk outbreak

There was another Norwalk virus outbreak at the hospital from April 26 to May 5, according to Rosebush.

"At the peak of the outbreak 30 resident and 25 staff were affected," said Rosebush. "There were no hospital infections to report during that time period."

Earlier in the meeting Rosebush confirmed that the HHHS had recently received a cheque from the government covering all of the costs associated with the first H1N1 outbreak in the fall.

Ultrasound services on their way

The HHHS is slowly but surely moving closer to providing ultrasound services, according to Rosebush.

"I have received verbal approval from York Ultrasound for the services but of course we can't get going until we receive written approval," said Rosebush. "I'm disappointed we haven't been able to implement this yet but we just have to wait for that final approval."

Bottum asked how long it would take to implement the service.

"Could be as quick as 48 hours after the approval is received," Rosebush said.

CYCLING TO SCHOOL

Clean commute

DARREN LUM

Staff reporter

For Grade 9 Haliburton Highland Secondary School students Samantha Vanier and Russell Fawns, commuting is simple when you have the right attitude.

Despite the dark clouds hovering over Loon Lake and more than 16 kilometres left in their bicycle commute to the high school from their homes in Wilberforce and Harcourt, the two fair-haired friends, were matter-of-fact about meeting the Haliburton County Commuter Challenge.

The commuter challenge is a competition organized by the Haliburton branch of the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit that is open to workplaces, groups and individuals who use an active mode of transportation for destinations between May 30 and June 5. Participants who completed the most mileage were eligible for gift cards while everyone had the opportunity to win draw prizes.

Samantha felt compelled to meet this challenge to show that commuting is possible through exercise rather than a vehicle.

With nothing more than their department store bicycles, a banana, some water, a rag (for a slipping chain) and gel seat covers, the two see such things as distance, time and the terrain as nothing more than aspects of the journey. After all, there is always a flip side they say, referring to the hills that characterize the Highlands.

"Once you get up them you get to go down them," Russell said. "It keeps things interesting."

When people at school hear of their endeavour the reaction is always the same, they said.

"A lot of people thought we were crazy," Russell said.

Neither of them have a particular mileage goal, but both felt a need to do their part for the challenge.

Their advice to adults reluctant to commute in something other than a vehicle is to start small.

"You can always do a little bit," said Samantha, who made sure to bring her puffer for her asthma. "If you drive half way [to where you need to go] and just take the bike out of the car and bike or walk you can get a bit of exercise and use less fuel," added Russell, who loves exercise, including regular weight lifting.

Sue Shikaze, health promoter for the Haliburton Highlands Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit, saw the pair riding through town at 8 a.m., more than two hours from when they started. She was impressed by their attitude to meet the challenge despite what most people consider challenges.

"You don't have to have fancy gear and an expensive bike. You need to have the right attitude and obviously they do," she said. "I think that is awesome."

Although they wanted to ride to school earlier in the week, Samantha's mom wasn't too thrilled with the prospect of rain and the two postponed their ride to this past Thursday.

The two friends expect to complete the commute at least a couple more times after the challenge and also have aspirations of completing a ride to Peterborough together.

Cooling the rivalry

THREE ARE A COUPLE of universal principles that govern the county of Haliburton (and most other cottage country locales around the province). One is that locals provide services and cottagers buy those services and the other is that both sides of the equation complain about each other.

There are individual exceptions to the rule; many locals enjoy their seasonal neighbours and vice versa, but the rivalry will always exist.

Garbage strewn about a country road, blamed on city people in a letter a couple of weeks back, has brought this tug of war to the surface.

A few cottagers have written in to say it upsets them to be blamed for this behaviour and to be derided with derogatory names (see Charlie Teljeur's column on this page for more on that side of the dispute).

Their consternation is fair. It's not their fault.

A person throwing garbage into the woods is the fault of one individual who doesn't care about the environment around him and probably doesn't know that a bear is soon going to come and rip that bag apart, strewing cigarette packages and candy wrappers all around.

As much as the cottagers and locals roll their eyes at each other all summer long (which we should all take with a bit of humour), placing blame on an entire group for the actions of one careless individual makes us all look bad.

Schools impress

This week's paper is filled with education news: vice-principals transferring, HHSS's head secretary honoured for her dedication to the students, nine staff members winning Character Awards, high school kids cycling to school from Harcourt and Wilberforce and other students competing in provincial cycling competition.

All of the stories feature students and staff who are full of creativity; dedicated to bettering themselves and those around them within the framework of the school system.

It's a good sign – our schools are where the most important work happens, where students discover who they are going to be in adulthood – and the fact that there is so much going on to inspire those young minds signals a healthy future for our community.

What have we learned?

THE RECENT GARBAGEGATE (my name, trademarking it as we speak) going on in our community has raised a lot of interesting points to ponder. (To summarize the story for those living outside the vital gossip loop: [1] evidently reams of garbage have been left along some roadside somewhere in the county [2] locals are blaming "citiots" or "cidiots" [or both] for the mess [3] citiots/cidiots resent the unfounded charge and [4] because of shoddy reporting we are currently unsure whether said garbage is still in said unknown location.)

First off we need to determine correct spelling of the term "citiot" (or "cidiot"). Nothing takes the steam out of a libellous charge (or a joke) more than fumbled spelling.

Second, we need a rural equivalent to "citiot" (or "cidiot"). All good arguments eventually devolve into moronic name-calling and until we have a concise and an agreed-upon term for people who live in the country, we'll never be able to reach that brilliant level of playground discussion we seem to be heading towards. I'd like to suggest "troglodyte" since it forces the curious country bumpkin to either reach for his dictionary or for his money so that he can buy a dictionary.

The advent of Garbagegate should also demonstrate to us the vital need for a forensic unit in the area to investigate these minor occurrences but major crimes against cleanliness, decorum and stereotyping. Simply blaming the crime on a "citiot" (or "cidiot") means we have approximately three-million possible suspects and our jail's just not that big. Let my $1.50 be the first contribution towards CSI Haliburton.

We should also recognize the tasty irony created by carrying this argument as far as we've carried it. More people getting their fur up means more letters being written, which means more letters to the editor, which means more paper being printed, which means – BING – more garbage!

Ultimately we should use Garbagegate as a learning tool to unite rather than divide us. I think it's safe to say we're all generally in agreement that human waste isn't meant to spread out haphazardly along a country road (unless it's Garbage Pitch Road, east of Gooderham) so we do have a significant starting point to work from.

We need to realize that it isn't the people from the city who carelessly chuck garbage out along a country side road and it isn't the rural folk/troglodytes either (although wouldn't it be deliciously cool if the new CSI Haliburton unit discovered that it was a bumpkin disguised as a citiot/cidiot?).

So, now that we're all friends again, we can righteously direct our anger towards the truly disgusting and littering culprit: the black bear. Those things have no respect for nature.

Call it a curse

AFTER READING the news, I must admit, I was more than a bit unnerved. I was actually scared. After all, the parallels were blatantly obvious.

"If it can happen to Debrahlee Lorenzana, it can surely happen to me," I mumbled.

"What are you talking about now?" my wife asked.

In typical fashion, she acted as if she was completely unaware of the plight of Ms. Lorenzana, a beautiful 33-year-old woman who claims her employer, Citibank, fired her for looking too sexy. Now she's in the process of filing a lawsuit because of it.

"Before I answer that," I said, "I think it would be prudent for me to change into something a little less revealing."

"Less revealing?" she said. "But you're wearing track pants and a sweatshirt!"

Just as I feared, her wandering eyes had already noticed. Worse still, she had undoubtedly commenced the process of mentally undressing me – something that she tried to hide by burying her head in a book. It was sly, I'll give her that, but, of course, I knew better.

Why, I thought, does this always happen to me? Why can't people understand that I have a beautiful mind too?

Working from my home office has never been easy. But now that employers have slipped into the habit of firing a person just for looking too darn good, it occurred to me that my working life was going to be hell from here on in. More than that, yesterday morning's incident suddenly made a whole lot more sense.

"This explains why you didn't let me mow the grass," I said accusingly, upon my return.

"What are you talking about? And why are you wearing a poncho?"

"You know exactly what I'm talking about," I said, while I tried my very best to tone down my raw sexiness. Unfortunately, I failed miserably once again.

"I didn't let you mow the grass yesterday because you do a lousy job," she lied.

"And it has absolutely nothing to do with my Hawaiian shorts and snug white knee socks, I suppose," I countered.

"Well, that get up is distracting to passing motorists," she conceded.

Just as I suspected, my cursed good looks and this lanky physique had landed me into trouble once again. I couldn't help but curse the ridiculously perfect genetics that were bestowed upon me.

"I am much more than impeccably chiselled features and a smoking hot body you know," I sputtered. But it was obviously a futile gesture.

The way she held her stomach and laughed uncontrollably for several minutes merely supported my assertion that people never take me seriously because of my looks.

"Stop it," she giggled, while slapping her knee. "I can't take anymore!"

"Hey! I'm up here," I said. "At least have the decency to look me in the eyes."

But, of course, she never did look me in the eyes after that. She tried, but would only giggle uncontrollably, each time. It was completely unbecoming.

The truth is I couldn't help but feel sorry for her. For, as a self-employed freelance writer, I happen to be my own boss. Because of this, I too can attest to the fact that I am often, unbeknownst to me, unbearably distracting on some days. It's not the first time I have had to pull myself into the office for a little talk about appropriate attire, for instance. Take last week when I came to work in pajamas.

It's got to the point where I have actually considered firing myself over the issue. The only thing that is stopping me is the legal repercussions of such an act. I know for a fact that I'd sue.

And yet I also understand that as an employer, I can't blame myself as an employee for being the complete package. After all, it's not like I can help it.

That's why I'm proud to say that my workplace now has a policy of tolerance to blatant sexiness.

By the way, Debrahlee, I'm taking resumes...

Reader enjoys silence of Rail Trail

To the Editor:

With the arrival of June and the gradual return of ATVs to the Rail Trail, I appreciate even more the serenity we enjoyed through April and May. Profound thanks to those who authorized and installed the strategic barriers; they seem to have done the trick.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if county council were to continue with the barriers and simply return the trail to nature?

'It takes all kinds of people' says reader

To the Editor,

I cannot believe you would publish a letter that contained so little substance and so much generalized disdain.

I have been visiting Haliburton for more than 20 years and am currently raising a third generation Haliburton cottager. My husband and I work hard in the city so that we are able to spend time in this wonderful place – our home away from home. We truly value the beauty of Haliburton and go out of our way to both protect the local environment and support the local economy. We feel like part of this community and I am glad to have access to the goods and services provided by the people who make Haliburton their permanent home.

I am always shocked when I see/hear cottagers (owners or renters) facing hostile attitudes from local residents and businesses. I have heard the term Mr. Davis used more times than I care to count, and always by people whose livelihood depends on the business provided by the people they are describing with such contempt. It takes all kinds of people to make the world go around, and perhaps it is time that some more pluralistic urban attitudes started making their way north.

You help nobody by providing people like Mr. Davis's with access to an audience. If someone has a viable solution to a problem, expressing it in a respectful and constructive manner should be a pre-requisite to being published.

And it was a lot more exciting than she had expected.

"I didn't think I would like it as much as I did," Sophie says a month after the three-day trip that ran from May 1 to 4.

Along with fellow Grade 11 Haliburton High student, Lindsey Pogue, Sophie toured the city visiting the Supreme Court, meeting the Speaker of the House of Commons, the Dutch ambassador and Liberal MP Justin Trudeau.

Trudeau gave a speech during lunch to the students – an inspiring moment for Sophie.

"I didn't know much about [Trudeau]," Sophie says, "but listening to him it was like he was with you ... seeing the potential in every person."

All of the students were paired up and boarded by people in Ottawa.

Sophie and Lindsey were nominated for the trip by their teachers and the final selection was made by principal Gary Brohman.

When she was told she was selected, Sophie didn't have to think twice.

"It's a big honour, so you say yes," she says.

After three days of intense civic engagement (and education) the pinnacle of the trip arrived when the students were taken to see 35 people receive their Canadian citizenship.

"It was really amazing," she says, "It was at the end and everyone really feels patriotic. There was a lot of clapping."

But it wasn't just the places they visited that made Sophie feel so connected to her country.

It was also the other students she met coming from one coast to the other.

"You see people from across Canada and see how different we are, but also how much the same."

MOVING ON

JDHES vice-principal moving to Wilberforce

JENN WATT

Editor

There are many things J.D. Hodgson Elementary School principal Traci Hubbert will miss about outgoing vice-principal Gord Wood – he's fair, funny and gets along well with everyone – but one quality stands out above all.

He's a fanatic Toronto Maple Leafs fan.

"Every assembly he starts off with something like, Go Leafs, Go, and the kids will boo him," Hubbert says of the teacher and VP who has spent the past seven years at her school.

"When [the Leafs] weren't doing well at the beginning of the season, we do the character education pieces [with the students] and he's like, 'The Toronto Maple Leafs are showing compassion to the other teams in the league by allowing them to win,'" she laughs.

Weaving his passion for the sport into his relationship with the kids and colleagues is one of the charms Wood has, something Hubbert will miss as he moves on to Wilberforce Elementary School in September to become VP there.

"He has a great sense of humour. I think he's fair and firm, which makes an excellent vice-principal. He has an outstanding rapport with everybody – with staff and students," she says.

Wood started his career at WES in 1999 as a teacher. He spent two years there before coming to JDHES and says returning in a new role will provide a professional challenge.

"I'm sad to leave here, but happy to go back and excited to go back [to WES], because it will be basically a new school because it was a kindergarten to Grade 6 school before and next year it will switch to a Grade 4 to 8 school, which is the same as JDH," he says.

"That will be exciting for me."

Class sizes will be a little different, though, since WES has around 50 students while JDHES has another 300 on top of that.

The new position will be a fully administrative one – Wood spent part of his time teaching at JDHES – and he will be fully focused on WES.

Recently, principal Elaine Fournier had travelled back and forth between Cardiff and Wilberforce schools in her role. Adding Wood will allow her to concentrate on Cardiff while he handles Wilberforce.

Wood will be replaced by Peter Ferri, who is currently the vice-principal at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden.

Ferri transferred to the Trillium Lake-lands District School Board from the Peel board four years ago and said he's found the county welcoming and warm to him.

As a special education specialist, Ferri said he's looking forward to putting his expertise to work at JDHES.

"It sounds like he has an awesome special education background so we're really excited about that," Hubbert says of Ferri.

As for Wood, Hubbert says the move to Wilberforce is great for his career, but the school is still sad to see him go.

"We will miss him for sure. A lot. Because he is great. I'm sure Peter will be as well and we're looking forward to having him," she says.

BREAKFAST MEETING

Insurance for small business available through chamber

CHAD INGRAM

Staff reporter

Attendees of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce's monthly breakfast last week learned all about the group benefits insurance program businesses can access through the chamber.

The June 3 breakfast was held at Minden's Beaverbrook Golf Course, a member of the chamber for more than 40 years, where guest speakers were "The Benefits Coach," local insurance agent Shawn Hagerman and Shanthi Bascombe of elearnnetwork.ca.

The benefit package known as the Chambers Plan, and available to any member business of any Canadian chamber of commerce, is a great method for small businesses to attain insurance for their employees, Hagerman said.

The program, which offers all the benefits one would expect, from life insurance to insurance for critical illness and dismemberment to long-term disability, can provide coverage for businesses with between one and 50 employees and Hagerman said more than 28,000 businesses across the country use it.

The plan offers online capabilities for employers to customize and monitor their insurance plans and Hagerman said there is plenty of flexibility.

Employees can also go online to check up on their own coverage.

"It gives employees control over their health," Hagerman said.

A special feature of the plan, which Hagerman said was added at no charge to businesses, is access to the country's Best Doctors database, which provides information on some 50,000 medical specialists across Canada considered to be at the top of their fields.

Hagerman said this includes information such as estimated wait times, so that employees with severe illness can find the treatment they need as soon as possible.

Employees can stay on the plan until they are 75 years old, Hagerman said.

Bascombe runs the elearnnetwork.ca centre out of Haliburton's Fleming College.

Aimed at those who wish to continue or update their post-secondary education without leaving the area, the centre is affiliated with all of Ontario's publicly run colleges and universities and offers a range of programs, from basic computer literacy to trades programs to full university degrees.

"There are some things you can't learn online," Bascombe said, explaining that if someone wants to become a nurse, for example, they would have to leave the area.

There are many courses available online though and while some are self-guided, with students doing their work at whatever time they choose, others have set lecture times, with lectures being delivered via audio-visual equipment provided at the centre.

"Depending on the program, we have the technology that fits," Bascombe said.

The centre in Haliburton has been up and running for year and Bascombe said it has far exceeded the 30 course registrations it was expected to fetch with more than 100 course registrations and 29 active students.

Bascombe said the large majority of these students are women and that many are single mothers.

There are 18 elearnnetwork centres in 18 small and rural communities throughout central and eastern Ontario.

Dave Stevens of Beaverbrook thanked attendees for coming and said the golf course enjoyed an early start this year due to the warm weather.

"You can't cut the grass fast enough," he said.

Next month's breakfast is scheduled to be held at the new Molly's Bistro Bakery in Minden.

FRIENDS OF THE RAIL TRAIL

Sunday Rambles widely contributed to Rail Trail success

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff reporter

The Friends of the Rail Trail are celebrating their most successful season so far, which they contribute in large part to the popularity of the Sunday Rambles.

The organization held their annual general meeting on June 6 to wrap up the season and discuss the future of Haliburton's Rail Trail.

Treasurer Terry Carr discussed the organization's financial standings with the group, highlighting the success of this year's membership fees and participants.

"This is the first year we really had anything to report financial-wise," said Carr. "This year [which went from May to April 2010] we collected $320 in membership fees. That's compared to the $35 collected last year."

The organization collects a $5 membership fee, a price they feel is inclusive to all income levels. Individuals under the age of 18 as well as dogs are eligible for free memberships.

Originally formed in 2007, FoRT began without an operating budget. The membership fees, along with a railway history DVD made by the group, both largely contribute to the organization's finances.

Costs the organization has incurred include the creation of the DVDs along with the printing costs of the Sunday Rambles brochures. According to the executive committee, the quality of this year's brochure also contributed significantly to the success of the Sunday Rambles.

"I think this committee has come leaps and bounds since last year," said Marsales. "I'm so thrilled to see how many people came out to the rambles this year. I think our brochure really showed that we were serious. We had more people come out than Hike Haliburton."

In a presentation made to those in attendance, Marsales highlighted that overall attendance for the rambles was 326 people plus dogs. The rambles covered three out of the four municipalities in the county and contributed to local restaurant establishments due to a new socializing aspect introduced this year.

The rambles are held in April and May, the only months of the year ATVs and snowmobiles aren't permitted to use the trail. The presence of these motorized vehicles continues to interfere with the organization's hope that the Rail Trail could one day become a unique and vibrant characteristic of Haliburton County.

"The Rail Trail is something that could put us on an international map," said Marsales.

The executive committee is preparing to make a presentation to Haliburton's economic development committee this week to address some of the issues and benefits surrounding the trail. Among the topics to be addressed include the lack of road signage promoting the Rail Trail.

"Right now we're somewhat under the radar but that could all change," said Marsales. "The county is starting to notice us and every year we're creating more of a presence."

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Winning sounds great

DARREN LUM

Staff reporter

Giving great service is its own reward for a local hearing instrument specialist.

For Gord Kidd, the owner of Minden/Haliburton Hearing Service, he was just doing his job when he was named the recipient of the Access Award for the Haliburton region by the Canadian Hearing Society's Peterborough regional office a few weeks ago.

"I was quite surprised," he said. "I didn't even know there was such an award."

Kidd received the award after a society staff member nomination was made on his behalf because of his "ongoing contribution, beyond legislated requirements, to the wellbeing and advancement of people who are deaf, deafened or hard of hearing."

The society's accessibility committee chooses recipients of the award.

Four winners, one each from Peterborough, Durham, City of Kawartha Lakes and Northumberland will be recognized with Kidd at the seventh annual Corporate Challenge Kick Off fundraising event on June 8.

Kidd has been in business for more than 24 years. His dedication to his patients extended beyond his own services to include the partnership with the Canadian Hearing Society Peterborough branch, allowing them to work from his Haliburton office this past year.

Staff from the branch often come up to provide service for assisted devices that are installed in the home such as telephones, alarm systems and warning lights, he said.

"I [thought I] should just offer them my office in Haliburton and let them bring up their products to show the hearing impaired and thereby saving them running back and forth ... to see six to 10 people in one visit and centralize it," he said.

"It just seemed like a real compatible match for the hearing impaired and a good service that I can extend my office to give them more opportunity for more products."

Although he is capable of providing the initial service, Kidd does not always have the time to perform the follow up that people may require.

His business is more than just a job. It's a passion and something he has always been interested in since his younger days as a recording artist. Kidd continues to play, performing with the 50/50 band at various local events such as Midnight Madness in Haliburton.

A lifelong student of audiology, Kidd not only provides service, but also offers seminars to a wide range of people from the young to the old on hearing health education.

The common things people forget are that hearing degrades as we age and any damage incurred while young can be pronounced later in life.

"Hearing like any part of our body has a timeline on it," he said.

FAREWELL

Arts supporters Caryl and Ray Miller bid adieu

GEORGE FARRELL

Special to the Echo

The Haliburton County arts scene will soon be losing two of its best known and most ardent supporters. Caryl Miller, the long-time theatre maven, and her husband, author Ray Miller, will be leaving Haliburton's fair climes at the end of June to take up residence in Peterborough. It's good news for that burg, but sad news for the Highlands.

"Ray has macular degeneration and periretinal membrane disease," Caryl says. "He can no longer drive, and his independence is compromised, so health issues are a consideration."

"But all the amenities will be so close after the move, and I'll be able to get on a bus and get around," says Ray.

The Millers have sold their house near Eagle Lake, and will be moving into a small bungalow.

"We've taken downsizing to a whole new level," Caryl says.

While the Millers' Haliburton home sat on eight acres, "our new garden is the size of this back deck," she says.

Caryl Miller moved to the Highlands from Toronto in the early 1970s. She raised three children; Daniel, Andrew and Rick.

She was born and raised in England, and during her years there was involved in theatre and television. In the Highlands, she came to the performing arts through Dennis Sweeting, "a director who used to bring shows up from Lindsay," she says.

"He started a drama course at the high school. Diane Hagerman and Glen Carter were also involved. We had so much fun, and after the course was over we decided to start our own drama group, and we called it Highlands Little Theatre."

"Our first show was Blithe Spirit, and Bev Jackson, Dale McConnell, Glen Carter, Bonnie Fitzgerald and Betty Mark were all in it. Wayne Henderson was in charge of lighting, and on the second night the lighting board caught fire," Caryl recalls with a chuckle. "We had great chemistry, and 30 years later Highlands Little Theatre is still going strong."

Caryl, who backed out of the theatre executive last year, became as well known for her collection of period costumes as she was for her acting and directing. She started gathering costumes from the very beginnings of her local involvement in theatre.

"No one else had given it much thought," she says.

She kept the costumes in a spacious loft above the garage, and there's hardly been a theatrical production that hasn't availed itself of her fine collection. But all things come to an end, and the imminent move to Peterborough has meant that the costumes too have to go.

"The costumes are being looked after by Wayne Cooper," Caryl says, "but there are plans to store the collection in a permanent place."

Caryl and Ray Miller are moving out of Haliburton, but will not be far. "We'll really miss some of our longtime friends from Haliburton, but everybody goes to Peterborough, and we'll be bumping into people, I'm sure," said Caryl.

She has acted in a multitude of plays over the years, including character parts in Blithe Spirit and The Importance of Being Ernest, but it was while directing that she really started to enjoy herself.

She's justifiably proud of directing Michael Fay's Never Such Innocence Again.

"That play won nine different awards from the Eastern Ontario Drama League," Caryl says.

She directed Woman In Black, and also, for the summer festival, There Goes The Bride.

She enjoyed directing local talent Tim Nicholson in Here On The Flight Path.

It was while she was working on Flight Path that Caryl persuaded Ray to become involved in theatre, and he designed and built the sets for the production.

Ray Miller was born just outside Minden, in the same house as his dad.

He owned and operated Ray Miller Heating and Ray Miller Fuels in Minden. He moved away to Peterborough in 1969, where he worked for many years as a heating engineer and also as a Peterborough transit driver before moving back to the Highlands.

In addition to his engineering, design and carpentry skills, Ray also wrote a book titled From Coal Oil Lights To Satellites, which he published in 2005.

"It's comprised of stories that take place around Haliburton County. They're stories of events that happened to me over the course of my lifetime, and they include family and friends and such things as jobs and activities," he says.

Ray and Caryl Miller had a lot to do with the early days of Canoe FM radio, and it all started with Tiger Box DJ Services and Sound Systems.

"Ray is skilled with sound," Caryl says, adding to his already impressive resume.

Caryl and Ray took it upon themselves to take Tiger Box from Bancroft to Pickering and points in between.

They would provide the music for such events as weddings, parties and galas. After a few years of great success with Tiger Box, the couple decided enough was enough, and they sold the business.

"It was around that time that Dave Sovereign was looking for a sound engineer," says Caryl. "At that point there were just four guys starting Canoe and Ray actually basically built the first console for them."

In 2008, Caryl was recognized for her many contributions to theatre, by garnering the Highlander of the Year award, and on May 1 of this year at the arts award gala, she was honoured in a tribute by long-time friend Curtis Eastmure, which drew a standing ovation.

"I was just so proud, delighted and all the other emotions you can think of, when someone who you care about says those wonderful things about you in public," Caryl says.

Jim Blake, a former coordinator and founding member of the Arts Council ~ Haliburton Highlands witnessed the tribute, and has his own memories of Caryl.

"She's been a driving force in the theatre and I had the opportunity to work with her on different projects, including the formation of the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion, where she was, until recently, a member of the board of directors. She's always been present with really creative ideas. Her attitude is 'let's get on with it.' She's a force of nature, and I'll miss her dearly."

In case anyone thinks that Caryl Miller has retired from the entertainment field, think again. She's still performing in Jerelyn Craden's humorous comedy radio show Fireside Stories, which airs on Canoe FM. Miller plays the character role of Sybil.

"Caryl is a joy to work with," says Craden, "and has made the character of Sybil Beaucannon Hughes, lovable, hilarious and very popular."

Caryl is also "one of the most dynamic, vivacious and creative people, and she has enriched the cultural scene here exponentially," Craden says.

Haliburton's loss is Peterborough's gain; but what does the future hold for Caryl Miller's theatrical talents?

"Whatever I've got the energy for," she says. "Ray and I are quite happy to start over again, and we're looking forward to discovering how fulfilling our new life is going to be in Peterborough. We'll really miss some of our longtime friends from Haliburton, but everybody goes to Peterborough, and we'll be bumping into people, I'm sure."

Goodbye Caryl, goodbye Ray, thanks for the memories and all your incredible contributions.

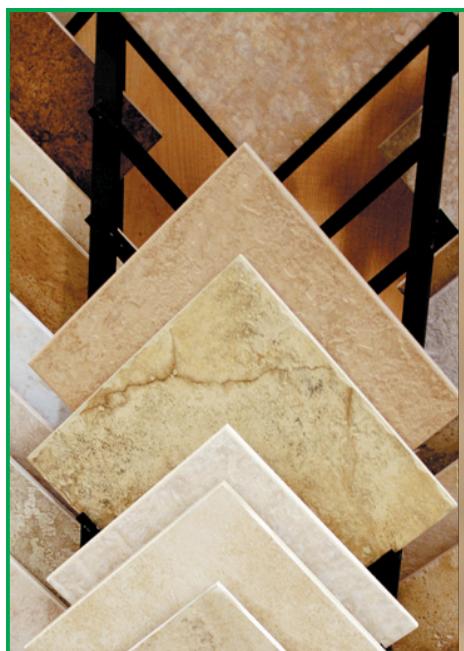

More than 100 people were in attendance to either watch the players in action or score the chance to have NHL rookie Matt Duchene autograph any item of their choice, including pictures, jerseys and even a coffee maker. In between signing autographs Duchene, who volunteered his time to support the cause, did what he does best and eventually picked up his hockey stick and joined in on the action. According to McMahon more than $1,300 was raised from the event with more donations to follow.

CHALLENGERS

Cyclists live for racing

DARREN LUM

Staff reporter

A Haliburton foursome is enjoying the ride on the way to fulfilling their potential this mountain biking season.

The Haliburton Cycling Club Youth Team learned a lot about themselves and the competition when they competed at the Canada Cup race hosted at the Hardwood Hills ski and bike complex located just outside Barrie on May 30.

The four cyclists, who were regulars at the local ski hill before coming together as a racing team, are practically never without their mountain bikes.

The youth team consist of Trey Kyle, 12, Nolan Flood, 10, with older brother Owen Flood, 12, and Ryan Hill, 12.

Trey, Nolan, Owen, and Ryan spoke with excitement about competing in the single-race event that had its largest field in years with 773 riders.

Although none of them was able to crack the top-10 in their respective categories, it was the experience and the pace that they enjoyed the most from the race.

"I'm not worried how I place I just want to have fun," Trey, a competitor in the minime men category for 13 to 14 year olds, said. He finished in 25th place.

This experience with the large field of riders with a variety of skill levels has given the team a clearer picture about the kind of work necessary for success in the remaining Ontario Cup series races.

Just behind Trey was his teammate Owen, who is optimistic for the future and believes in his abilities to surpass his recent finish.

"We try and get better each time we go out," he said, adding he expects to improve on his 26th placing in the race for the future. "It keeps me motivated."

Nolan, who finished in 38th place, and Ryan, who finished in the top half with a 21st place, both compete in the Peewee category for 10 to 12 year olds.

The group agrees that their experience of riding technical trails and their love of jumps has them at an advantage over their competition: something that they hope to exploit in the remaining Ontario Cup races and the Buckwallow race series in Bracebridge.

They expect their success relies on training rides that are as hard as racing conditions.

Their advisor, Blake Paton, a lifetime lover of cycling, who has experience racing, coaching and organizing races, is happy to provide some guidance to the youth team.

The training rides he offers, which are open to varying ages and skill levels, are essential to receiving rides in duration and distance similar to competitive races. This can help with building strength and endurance, he said.

The group meets twice a week on Monday and Thursday at 5 p.m. to ride the two km loop at Glebe Park.

Red Hawks host PALs meet

The Trillium Lakelands District School Board PALs track and field meet was hosted by the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School and drew more than 100 athletes from elementary and high schools throughout Haliburton County, including schools from neighbouring Bracebridge, Fenelon Falls and Lindsay this past Tuesday. There were a variety of events such as the 50 m, 200 m, high jump, long jump, ball toss, obstacle course and parachute games.

Red Hawk athletes were in fine form. Left: Amanda Walker stretches for distance, winning the long jump event. Below: Laura Voicey gets a high-five during the Parade of Champions to open the meet.

Roberts wants to continue work she started on council

ed," said Roberts. "It was a natural fit for me before to run for council. I wanted something I could sink my teeth into and I feel the same way now.

"After four years you feel like you're just beginning to make that difference," said Roberts. "The first year is really a learning curve. When you run it's like starting a new job in a field that you've never really worked in, although you know you have the skills to learn the job, you're still learning.

"I really feel that I enjoyed my first four years and I'd like to continue with some of the projects that we're working on that are just getting going, particularly the streetscape project. I'd really like to see these things through."

Roberts, who said she has enjoyed her first term on council, also believes there are some struggles facing the municipality and its taxpayers.

"A lot of the challenges are that we have a very large township geographically speaking," said Roberts. "It's exciting to see the streetscape project but we still have 350 kilometres of roads, we have bridges and infrastructure that we have to continue to maintain. New projects are great but maintaining what you have is equally if not more important."

Roberts will be squaring off with fellow candidate Jim Henwood during the upcoming months of campaigning.

Owner and operator of Henwood's Variety, Henwood said his dedication and commitment to the main street make him a prime candidate for council.

"I just feel that the downtown needs more of a representation on council," said Henwood. "There have been a couple of issues that have happened in the past four years that have really impacted the downtown area and I just don't think there was enough input [at the council level].

"I don't think it's any secret but it's the sign bylaw," said Henwood, when asked about the specific issues which affected the downtown businesses.

Henwood is referring to a 2007 bylaw council enacted requesting businesses to clean up the look of the downtown core by limiting the size, number and location of signs they can have.

"I know that the public did have some input, however I don't know whether it was a misunderstanding or whether it was more restricting than everyone thought. I just don't think it's right. I think the bylaw has to be amended for sure."

Henwood is familiar with the election race and the campaign process, having run three times for council positions. However, Henwood has yet to serve a term with the municipality.

"I ran for deputy-reeve last time and in hindsight it was probably too big a step," said Henwood. "This is probably the more appropriate way to go."

In terms of what qualifications Henwood brings to council, the local businessman believes his day job has prepared him for handling the needs of the community.

"Obviously where I am, as far as my business is concerned, I think I'm a person who sees the entire scope of the community," said Henwood. "I see all classes of people in my business. I see the struggles they go through on a day-to-day basis.

"I think I can bring a sense of realism to council that I don't think a lot of them see right now because they don't deal with it every day like I do."

"I also think I can bring a true downtown perspective to council and let them know that issues they put on the table regarding the downtown hugely affect the community as a whole. I've been here 15 years and I haven't seen anyone on council with a downtown business."

Henwood believes the health of the downtown core can significantly impact the entire municipality.

"I realize the downtown isn't the be all and end all," said Henwood. "If you put it into a nutshell, to me the businesses are like the centre of a tire and all the cottages and homes are like the rubber around the edge. So if your downtown isn't solid and the core collapses the tire goes flat."

"I realize there are some things council can't control, until you're sitting in that seat you don't know that," said Henwood. "But there are some things I think we need to look at."

Other issues Henwood would like to see brought to council include the need for recreation activities and upgraded facilities.

Accomplished author to speak in Highlands

Alanna Mitchell to speak at Abbey North about her research into oceans in support of CFUW

ANGELICA BLENICH

Staff reporter

Alanna Mitchell is not a writer. The accomplished journalist and author of two published books has devoted a large portion of her life to more than just penning words on a piece of paper. For most of her life, Mitchell has been investigating.

"I'm a sleuth at heart," said Mitchell. "I just absolutely love the research process involved with writing a book."

"For me there's the thrill of just figuring out how things are working and getting at the information."

"Putting all the information in my head and then spending months and months writing is also intensely joyful for me."

Mitchell worked as a journalist at the Financial Post and the Globe and Mail for 17 years before moving on to writing about global science issues.

Mitchell will be speaking at a fundraiser in Haliburton on June 13 in support of the Canadian Federation of University Women.

The invitation to speak at Abbey North came about through a family connection.

Owned by Mitchell's family relatives, Abbey North has been visited by the author numerous times.

"It's just a terrific setting for a talk," said Mitchell.

"It's inspiring in itself to see all that beautiful forest beside you. I absolutely love it up there in Haliburton. I find the landscape very inspirational."

Mitchell's latest book, Seasick: The Hidden Crisis in the Global Ocean is the title and topic of her visit to Abbey North. The book, said Mitchell, is a hybrid of her journalistic skills and her curious nature.

"I got really interested in what's happening to the major life support system on the planet which is the global ocean," said Mitchell.

"I spent about two-and-a-half years doing research on it, which for me as a

I discovered this whole hidden phenomenon on what's going on with the global ocean and became fascinated with it and wanted to explain it to people.

Alanna Mitchell

the ocean and then just hanging out with them. I did 13 journeys during that time, finding out more about the ocean, and then I wrote this book."

So how do science and journalism mix? The answer to that, said Mitchell, can be found right at home.

"My dad is a biologist and was one of the earliest ecologists in the Prairies," said Mitchell. "It was just bred in the bone. Being a kid in my dad's household meant fieldtrips and looking at how things worked together. It began to fascinate me."

Mitchell believes her books, though dealing with complex science issues and ideas, are really just an extension of her work as a journalist.

"When you're a journalist, you can just call people up and say 'look I'm a journalist I want to understand something' and I find scientists incredibly generous that way. You can spend hours on the phone with them and they will just explain stuff to you," said Mitchell.

"I also really like reading scientific papers. It's a little bit like investigative journalism. There is all of this information out there that scientists know about but people as whole don't know about."

Her latest book and subsequently her lectures are an example of exactly that journey of discovery.

"I discovered this whole hidden phenomenon on what's going on with the global ocean and became fascinated with it and wanted to explain it to people."

"Because I'm a storyteller my lecture will be about me explaining my journey along writing this book," said Mitchell, "which I hope to be quite amusing. It should be a reasonably uplifting talk as well. There's quite a lot of hope in the book."

"We're at a very unusual moment in the planet's history and one in which we have the possibility of really making a difference."

The Sculpture Forest is hosting a guided tour on Tuesday, June 22 to provide an opportunity for business owners, tourism facilitators and local residents to familiarize themselves with this local attraction. After taking the tour, when someone asks "What is there to do in Haliburton?" they will have the answer.

The event will begin at 10 a.m. with muffins and coffee in the Great Hall of Haliburton's Fleming College.

After a short presentation about the Sculpture Forest, the guided tour of the forest will begin. The familiarity tour will end at approximately 11:45 a.m.

This event is free of charge and everyone is welcome. Please contact us if you plan to attend 457-3555 or info@haliburtonsculptureforest.ca. For more information about the familiarity tour or the Sculpture Forest visit: www.haliburtonsculptureforest.ca.

ARTIST SUSAN HAY

GEORGE FARRELL

Special to the Echo

The vibrant and large acrylics by Susan Hay, on display at the Rails End Gallery, offer a different take on traditional landscapes, inasmuch as they're all paintings of shorelines. The point of view of each canvas is taken from a canoe out on the water.

Hay's husband paddles and steers their canoe while Hay captures images with her camera.

"The use of photography is essential and there's no way I could take a sketchbook," said Hay at the opening reception on Saturday, June 5. An excerpt from her artist's statement expands on her method: "back in the studio, I paint the scene in an impressionistic style, based on the photo, but modifying for artistic interest." The result is some truly stunning images.

"This show is a celebration of the beauty of Haliburton shorelines," said Hay. "I love the interesting shapes of the sky, rocks and trees and the reflections in the water."

Hay has a real feel for painting water, and in some instances, rocks visible under the water, complement shapes on the shore. "Lighting is also crucial," she said, "as well as a distance perspective."

It's true, that although rocks, trees and water occupy the foreground, in many of her images, the sky takes the eye back to a distance, a stratagem, which gives her works depth.

Texture is also very much at play in Hay's acrylics; not just the implied textures carefully wrought in the rocks and trees, but texture that has been trowelled on the canvas before the paint is applied.

"The canvas texture is created by the use of a moulding paste, which has the consistency of toothpaste,"

Hay said. "The texture gives the works a unique appeal and an abstract, rugged element, which goes well with the Canadian landscape."

That may well be, but one has the feeling that seeing this technique too often repeated could get quickly tiresome. Due to the size of some of the canvases, there aren't that many of them on display, and the natural lighting in the beautiful smaller room in the gallery also helps to soften what could be a distracting element.

Admirably there's a "green" ingredient to Susan Hay's work. "I've been an outspoken member of the Huron Stewardship council for six years," Hay said, "and I've learned a lot about stewardship practices. It gets harder and harder to find unspoiled shoreline as we develop it for our own pleasure. Our lakes and shorelines are treasures we can all protect by careful management of septic systems, docks, preservation of native species and avoidance of polluting substances."

Accompanying Hay's acrylics is an ongoing digital slideshow of more than 100 photos taken by Hay while canoeing around Sherborne Lake near Dorset, last summer. The slides reveal the exquisite beauty of this protected lake. Educational material regarding shoreline stewardship in our county is also displayed. All the visuals are accompanied by recorded sounds of birdsong and bubbling waters, which coalesce into an effective sight/sound sensorium. All that's missing is olfactory stimulation.

Hay, who is a retired nurse, lives in Huron County, and cottages on Portage Lake in the Highlands. Like many up and coming talented artists who've exhibited their works at the Rails End, she honed her technique by taking courses at the Haliburton School of the Arts. And like many of her colleagues, she credits John Leonard's contemporary landscape course in particular, as being very influential.

■ GETTING AROUND

Transportation forum at Fleming gets the ball rolling

DARREN LUM

Staff reporter

A recent forum on transportation alternatives for Haliburton County is setting the wheels in motion for a new way of thinking.

The three alternatives to driving a vehicle discussed at the forum were carshare, rideshare and the busing system as hosted by Fleming College this past Tuesday.

The forum's panel consisted of Judy Cumming, transportation coordinator for Community Care of Haliburton County, Stacy Kirkbride, community researcher for U-Links, Sherry Hayes, and transportation coordinator for Community Care of North Hastings, and Martin Grant, owner of Hyland Taxi.

The panelists presented their research findings and experience offering each option and gave examples that worked and did not work.

Carshare is a method of group ownership and usage of a vehicle from a collective through member fees. This can be as simple as a small group of people to thousands of members who pay a company for the privilege. It had its origins in Europe where fuel costs are higher and parking is limited.

Kirkbride, who completed a research paper for Environment Haliburton titled: Issues and Barriers in Rural Transportation – Models for Car Sharing and Opportunities in Haliburton County, outlined insurance challenges, financial costs towards the startup of such a program and the various examples.

Many carshares work on the "honour" system where users log their mileage and take responsibility for fuel and other maintenance costs as a collective. In towns smaller than Haliburton just outside Nelson, British Columbia, there were effective carshare programs. There is a good possibility Haliburton or Minden could have one of these vehicles, she said.

The fees for carshares are often inclusive and based on frequency of use, she said.

Smaller centres face the initial high cost of purchasing a vehicle for the carshare. A viable solution is to have a multi-vehicle owner use their unused vehicle for the program. Examples of rural areas using this model have several drivers using one vehicle with one name as the insurance policy holder.

This kind of insurance risk could be reduced if a partnership was formed with a carshare in Toronto to spread the level of risk.

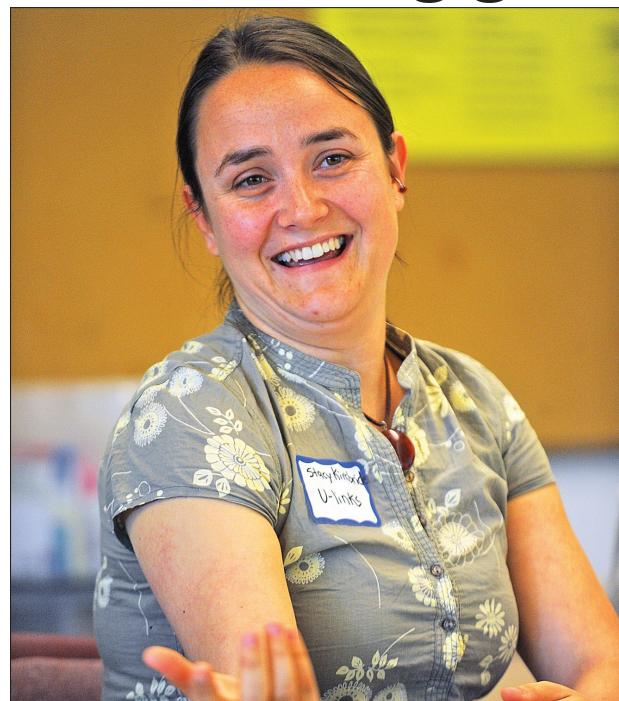

The concept of rideshare is the informal offering of a ride in a vehicle similar to what students will often do while at university when the drive home requires a few hours. In a workplace where there is a trust between colleagues this can work easily, but when offered to strangers there is an issue of trust and security. When the exchange of a fee between people for the ride exists the rideshare concept can work, as it is similar to a taxi ride, altering the perception for the passenger who lessens the feeling of guilt.

The busing system is a familiar concept and readily accepted in urban centres, but has its own set of challenges in lower populated areas such as Haliburton County where the car is king.

The main hurdle for all of these types of transportation options is the public's perception.

For the older generation car ownership has always been associated with success and the "cool" factor for young adults cannot be ignored.

"When you don't have access to a car 24-hours a day you're more likely to use an alternative form of transportation," Kirkbride said.

Known as the Rural Overland Utility Transit, or the TROUT, the bus system for the North Hastings and Highlands East is popular and is an example for Haliburton to follow since the population and the size of land area is similar. The name was chosen because it resonates with the public being closely tied to the region's outdoor culture.

It has garnered attention as a result of an aggressive marketing campaign that included posters, pamphlets, advertisements on the radio, in the newspaper and a Facebook page. She adds education was an essential ingredient towards altering the public's perception such as directing the advertisement to busy parents or families without a second car who still require transportation when the family vehicle is in use.

"We're promoting it as something that anyone can use," she said.

Previously known as the handibus system, the fleet includes two 14-passenger buses, including one space for a wheelchair. They expect to add a 16-seat bus, capable of carrying two wheelchairs, complete with a carrier for a bike. It offers one-time ride tickets and "convenience" multi-passes that have been well received. The system is funded in part by offering advertisement space on the side of the bus and the provincial gas tax rebate.

After the presentations by the four panelists the audience broke into three groups (carshare, rideshare, and a car/bus pool system) to discuss the likely effective ideas for the county.

When the groups convened they discovered that carsharing could work once a set structure was in place for organization and that ridesharing is a possibility, citing the Grumpy's Taxi example of scheduled stops between Haliburton and Fleming College.

And if any rideshare program will work it is important that people get beyond the insecurity of taking or offering a ride to a stranger be replaced with the "taxi" example when there is an exchange of funds for service.

Although there was interest about taking the ideas forward it was uncertain who would be responsible to implement one of the three transportation options raised during the forum.

There were close to 30 participants in attendance for the forum that included representatives from Community in Action, Ontario Healthy Communities Coalition, Environment Haliburton, and the two taxi companies: Grumpy's and Hyland Taxi.

Creative economy key to Haliburton's future: Parker

pality in a different way.

Parker has filed to run for deputy-reeve of Dysart et al, a position even she will admit is ambitious.

"I know my own personality well enough to know I wouldn't stay at the same level," said Parker in regards to her decision to run for deputy-reeve.

"Four years ago Bill [Davis] said this would be his last term and for me that opened up the possibility."

The decision to run, said Parker, came about in an effort to bring change along with a new perspective to council.

"For me nothing will ever change in Haliburton as long as the two people are the very same age," said Parker.

"We've got Murray [Fearrey] and Bill [Davis] who are exactly the same age so how is it ever going to evolve?"

Parker and her husband own and operate Parker Pad and Printing which currently has two locations, one in Markham and one in Haliburton.

Parker recently sold her house in Markham, emphasizing her commitment to the Highlands.

"I'm living here full time now except for the occasional night in Markham," said Parker.

There are a few things Parker believes the municipality needs to address in the future.

"I think that we really need to work on being open for business," said Parker. "I think that we're scaring off some businesses. What worries me is that we're so careful in protecting what we have that we're scared to try anything else."

"I'm worried we're going to scare off Watercolours, or the low-income housing or Tim Hortons. If it's so hard to build here are people going to build here? We've got to embrace some of these changes."

Another topic Parker would like to see brought forth to the municipality is the importance of a thriving arts community.

"I really love the arts and I want to help them build," said Parker. "I don't want to be known as a red-neck Haliburtonian. We can spend hours debating ATVs but we won't even consider sponsoring Dusk Dances."

Despite the variety of changes Parker would like to see addressed, the candidate has been pleased with some of the recent developments in Haliburton.

"I'm absolutely thrilled with the library, that was really important to me," said Parker.

"The Rails End Gallery has also had an amazing come around and we're getting the skateboard park and the streetscape."

Parker hopes these changes are just the start of many more things to come.

"I want us to embrace the creative economy and the green economy and move into the next century. I just want to change the way people perceive Haliburton."

Hilda Clark
448-2018

The Wilberforce school was well represented at the track and field meet at the Haliburton high school on Tuesday, May 25. The students who had trained well under the coaching of Mrs. Davies and Mrs. Bain placed very well in a number of events.

A team of Kelsey Maracle, Jade McCartney, Alexandra French and Eryn Solmes placed second in a relay race for girls. The boys' relay team of Kurtus Tarbett, Dylan Smith, Mark Lewis and Taylor Lewis placed third in their race.

A number of girls placed well in individual events. Hailey Alden was sixth in long jump, Taylor Davies was third in the 200-metre race, second (tie) high jump and fifth in 100 metres. Kendra Anderson placed first in high jump, first in long jump and fifth in ball throw. Emilee Straker was third in high jump and first in ball throw. Kadie Raimey was sixth in ball throw. Melinda Meharrie was sixth in triple jump. Nolan Davidson-Blakey was fifth in the 1,500-metre race. Carmen Galea was sixth in the 400-metre run. Kelsey Maracle place first in shot put and second in ball throw. Congratulations to all of these competitors who achieved such fine results.

Dennis Billings was feted at a great retirement party on Saturday, June 5 at the Moose Hall in Lindsay. Dennis, who grew up in Wilberforce, retired recently after 32 years of employment with the town of Lindsay. Among the many friends and family who attended with lots of love and best wishes were his aunt Florence Taylor of Wilberforce, his uncle Moss Billings and cousin Jane Barras. Best wishes, Dennis, from your friends in Wilberforce. We hear that Dennis and Linda will get the retirement years started with a trip out on the British Columbia coast.

Sandi and Bill Smith celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with family and friends on Saturday, June 5. The Smiths are the well-known owners/operators of Elephant Lake Lodge. Sandi and Bill and their family have been active in community life in this area for many years. We wish them many years of good health and happiness.

Kendra Anderson who is a student at the Wilberforce school excels not only in track and field. She has been presented with the arts award sponsored by Sir Sandford Fleming College. Kendra will attend a free week at an art camp of her choosing during this summer of 2010. Congratulations Kendra. May this be a week full of opportunities to develop your creative talents. Have fun.

Several Wilberforce kids were part of the Heritage Ballet's spring dance recital. Drew Rupnow, Ryan Rupnow and Taylor Davies enjoyed being part of program that was on stage at the Northern Lights Pavilion in Haliburton on Saturday and Sunday, June 5 and 6.

Have you seen these reptiles?

On May 20, the Haliburton Highlands Land Trust (HHLT) was approved for a grant for $30,300 from Environment Canada's Habitat Stewardship Program for Species at Risk. This project focuses on wetlands and reptiles. It will provide opportunities to identify candidate provincially significant wetlands.

In 2008, many residents of the County of Haliburton assisted HHLT by looking for Species at Risk. Because of those efforts, that project was tremendously successful and we were able to double the number of sightings in the county, thereby greatly enhancing our understanding of their distribution.

This summer, HHLT in partnership with The Land Between will be conducting field surveys to improve our understanding of biodiversity in the county of Haliburton. All new information will be added to HHLT's database to support conservation planning for the County of Haliburton. In addition, all data will be submitted to the Ministry of Natural Resources/Natural Heritage Information Centre and Environment Canada to support conservation planning at the provincial and federal levels.

A variety of workshops will be held throughout the summer to increase awareness of Reptiles at Risk in Haliburton County. Help us document the rich ecological diversity in Haliburton County by attending those workshops and by locating and reporting the species detailed on the HHLT Reptiles at Risk poster.

The data will also be submitted to the MNR/Natural Heritage Information Centre and Environment Canada to support conservation planning at the provincial and federal level.

If you would like to help document the rich ecological diversity in the County of Haliburton, you can do that by emailing information to Paul Heaven at pheaven@glenside-eco.ca or by calling him at 286-3181. We are interested in sightings of Reptiles at Risk, specifically 1) Milksnake; 2) Eastern Ribbonsnake; 3) Five-lined Skink; 4) Stinkpot; 5) Wood Turtle; 6) Spotted Turtle; 7) Blanding's Turtle; and 8) Snapping Turtle.

These species are hard to find so we want to hear about all sightings, dead or alive. Please make careful note of your location (GPS, roads etc.) and take a photograph (No camera? Use your cell phone!).

We are particularly interested in linking turtles to wetlands, so if you have a wetland on your property and know there is a rare turtle in that wetland, please contact Paul and arrange for a site visit. Only with your cooperation can we identify wetlands that are important to Reptiles at Risk.

Thank you for your cooperation and we look forward to hearing from you!

Thinking about prepaying your funeral wishes?

The longer you wait, the more tax you will pay.

Recent changes in Ontario's tax structure will add an eight percent tax to funeral arrangements effective July 1st, 2010. The good news is you can avoid this increase if arrangements are prepaid before the effective date.

Prearrangement can offer peace of mind to you, and can spare your family from all of the hard decisions that need to be made at an often difficult and emotional time.

Call us for more information. We are here to help make it easier.

Those whom we love go out of sight,
But never out of mind;
They are cherished in the hearts
Of those they leave behind.
Loving and kind in all his ways,
Upright and just to the end of his days;
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories he left behind.
